

What's the big deal? Why get so worked up over the Creation vs. evolution question? It doesn't matter....

One year, while in the middle of the hustle and bustle of Christmas, I lamented to the Lord that I must have incorrectly heard his leadings for my life. Let me clarify... you see I am a wife, mother of five, and homeschooler. I am an educator, not a scientist. I have no formal education in Creation science and I KNEW I must have taken a left when the Lord wanted me to go right. What was I doing writing and publishing Creationist materials? I wanted out. I wanted to return to a quiet life (okay, as quiet as possible in a household of seven people)... Yet, anyone who has run a business from home knows what I mean.

To condense a long story, I went to a local members-only warehouse to purchase a nativity set I have had my eye on. When I looked at the glass encased set I was shocked! There, proudly displayed on the Sheppard's shoulder was a calling card proclaiming that Christianity was a myth for the uneducated (see copies below). I was so hurt I could not open the card nor read the interior. How could someone place this card on a scene depicting what I believed was one of the greatest miracles of all times?

When I looked for a name or an address so that I might respond to this individual, all I found was an insignia—the Darwinian evolution fish. The fish has long been a symbol of Christianity. The Lord is the author of life! We did not happen by chance as Darwinian evolution proclaims, in its molecules-to-man mantra. Yes, the Lord had answered my question. I still have much work to do. There are so many unbelievers, so many who deny Christ. As you can see by the quotes below, without a belief in the Bible, and ultimately God, man is left to his own devices and assumptions. Unfortunately the outcome of man's intellectual musings aren't always correct! Contrary to what secular scientists or the media proclaims, evolution has never been proven.

Please join me by helping to spread the Creation message! God is indeed alive, He is indeed relevant. Without God, we are as lost as the person who went to a great expense, and effort, printing a linen card proclaiming that Christianity is dead. I beg to differ.

The calling card I found on a Nativity Scene:

“ God is the asylum of the ignorant.”
Spinoza

“Religion began when the first knave met the first fool.”
Voltaire

“There is something feeble and a little contemptible about a man who cannot face the perils of life without the help of comfortable myths. Almost inevitably some part of him is aware that they are myths and that he believes them only because they are comforting. But he dares not face this thought! Moreover, since he is aware, however dimly, that his opinions are not rational, he becomes furious when they are disputed.”
...”Most people, whose intelligence is much above the average are, nowadays, openly or secretly agnostic.”

Bertrand Russell

The idea of a god implies the abdication of human reason and justice; it is the most decisive negation of human liberty and necessarily ends in the enslavement of mankind both in theory and in practice.

He who desires to worship a God Must harbor no childish illusions about the matter but bravely renounce his liberty and his humanity.

Mikhail Bakunin (1814-76),
